THURSDAY EVENING, APRIL 9.

"CHEWING GUM."—We have seen several children lately chewing a white substance, and when we asked what it was, we were answered that it was "chewing gum." Now if the little boys and girls of our city knew what they were gridding between their teeth, it would come out of their mouths faster than it went in. The practice of chewing this gum has become very general, so much so that it is used all over the Union from Maine to Texas, and from Virginia to California. So great is the demand that it requires several large factories to furnish the supply, the chief of which are in the New England States. In all of them the material out of which the "gum" is manufactured is the same, viz: dead animals. A dead dog is carried to a factory, its flesh, fat, &c., are combined with various chemical substances, and in a few hours what went into one door as a rotten carcass comes out of another chewing gum. Of course some of the chemical acids to which the loathsome flesh of the dog is subjected are apt to remain in excess in the gum. In how ever small quantities may remain, they are sure to ruin the teeth. Every parent and teacher should therefore strictly prohibit the chewing of this abominable gum; and we have written this article both to show children what a nasty thing they are in the habit of chewing and how certainly their health will be injured by it and their teeth rotted out by it.—Norfolk Virginian.

PURCELLVILLE.—We hope before long to see a thriving village at Purcellville. It is beautifully situated in the very heart of a rich and productive agricultural region, and offers many inducements either to the business man of the city looking for a country residence for his family, or the settler of those who by industry and enterprise hope to secure a pleasant and profitable location for the employment of their brain and muscle.—Loudoun Mirror.
